

Preface

I hope everyone has a productive New Year. As a gift, I am publishing the Winter 2023 issue of the online Lacanian journal Parceque ce n'est pas ca (in English). The general thematic of this issue is 'translation'. But translation taken in a broad context. Of course, all the contributors approach their subjects with a Lacanian ear.

Jean-Pierre Cléro works on the question of what interpretation means in a Lacanian framework. Jean-Michel Vives adds a clinical study describing how two individuals on the autistic spectrum use music to communicate and to regulate their jouissance without having to enter into the Symbolic register. Juan Pablo Luchelli discusses the parallels existing between the Little Hans case as it was described by Lacan and 'The Myth of the Pregnant Boy' as told by Claude Lévi-Strauss. And, finally, Andrew Stein analyses the political and unconscious meaning of the signifier 'herd immunity' used by the American Right between 2019-2022; and how the signifier expresses certain civilizational discontents in the social link.

Each author has answered the question of translation in their own manner. Providing readers with a rich and exciting series of essays.
